

A Long Legged Brussels Griffon

Brussels Griffons are meant to be square in proportion, but maybe be lanky through adolescence.

By Allan Reznik

Q. I have a Brussels Griffon who has long legs. Does that breed have long legs? I had one before and he didn't have long legs.

A. Brussels Griffons are meant to be square in proportion, so their height from the top of the shoulder to the ground should equal their length from chest to buttocks. However, most dogs go through a lanky teenage period. With maturity, your dog will probably come together and regain his square silhouette.