

We Asked You to Guess: What Kind of Dog Is This?

We received tons of entries, but only a few had the correct guesses. Here are the results you've been waiting for!

Sponsored By Bit-O-Luv dog treats are made in the USA with USDA inspected meat free of any artificial flavors, colors, or byproducts. What better way to thank your four-legged family member than with a slow-roasted, mouthwatering snack that's good enough for people, but made for dogs. 877-288-7910; www.bitoluv.com

Guinness

Test Results

Significant Breed: Dalmatian

Intermediate Breeds: Briard and Maltese

The Editors Say: We see Guinness' black-and-white coloring and short, smooth coat coming from the Dal, while the Maltese gives him his small size.

Congratulations to Wendy Jordan, who won the drawing of correct entries for Guinness. She wins $50 worth of goodies from Bit-O-Luv dog treats.

Oliver

Test Results

Significant Breed: None

Intermediate Breeds: Alaskan Malamute and Siberian Husky

Minor Breed: Collie

The Editors Say: We'll admit, Oliver had us all stumped! The lack of a significant breed probably means he's a multi-generational mutt. We think his rough coat is reminiscent of the Collie, but with more of a Malamute or Husky's length to it.

Congratulations to Troy and Jennifer Valleen, who were the only ones to guess two of three breeds correctly for Oliver. Bit-O-Luv is sending them $50 worth of dog goodies.

Pony Boy

Test Results

Significant Breed: Pomeranian

Intermediate Breeds: Pug and Basset Hound

The Editors Say: We think Pony Boy's coat coloring comes from the Pom. But his short fur, body size, and stature are a mix of Pug and Basset.

Congratulations to Kathy Anastor, who won the drawing of correct entries for Pony Boy. She will receive $50 worth of treats
