

Airline Loses Faith the Dog

American Airlines loses popular two-legged dog during flight mix-up.

Posted: February 27, 2007, 5 a.m. EST

Turns out you just gotta have Faith.

Faith the Dog, the two-legged dog whose uplifting story has inspired countless fans and earned her appearances on “The Oprah Winfrey Show” and “The Late Show with David Letterman,” was lost last week at Orlando International Airport after American Airlines put her on the wrong flight.

Owner Jude Stringfellow told WESH-TV in Orlando that after arriving on a flight from Oklahoma City, no one from the airline could find her dog for several hours.

American Airlines finally tracked Faith down. The dog had inadvertently been put on a different flight than Stringfellow, who was traveling with Faith to Orlando to attend the Global Pet Expo, a pet industry trade show.

A spokesperson for American Airlines said that they take responsibility for losing Faith and will investigate the incident.

Learn more about Faith at www.faiyththedog.net