

The DogChannel Newswire (07-04-08)

GPS recovers lost dogs; man gets jail time for stealing puppy; and other dog news.

Posted: July 4, 2008, 5 a.m. EDT

See Spot Run. See Where He Went

This summer, a new generation of pocket-size gadgets — with names like FindWhere, Zoombak, GPS Snitch, and PocketFinder luggage device — offer a way to use the Global Positioning System to track the people, pets, and possessions they love, The New York Times reports.

Read the article >>

Arrest in Brutal Dog Attack on Staten Island Man

A 90-year-old Staten Island man had three of his limbs amputated after a brutal attack in his own yard by two neighboring pit bulls Tuesday, authorities said, Newsday reports.

Read the article >>

Milwaukee Pet Cemetery Where Sex Symbol Buried Dog Closes

Sex symbol Jayne Mansfield was looking for eternal rest for her Chihuahua Gallina when she buried her in a suburban Milwaukee pet cemetery in 1964. It turns out nothing lasts forever, The Associated Press reports.

Read the article >>

Plainfield Man Gets 60 Days for Stealing Puppy

A Plainfield man who stole a $1,500 Pomeranian puppy and blew marijuana smoke into its face until it passed out was sentenced Wednesday to 60 days in the DuPage County Jail, the Chicago Tribune reports.

Read the article >>

TSA Debuts Canine Searches

The Transportation Security Administration inaugurated a nationwide security program at Washington-Dulles International Airport on Wednesday, in which canine teams will sniff cargo containers bound for passenger-carrying aircraft, The Washington Times reports.

Read the article >>