

Maker of Baked Dog Treats Issues Recall

American Health Kennels Inc. voluntarily recalls dog treats following peanut paste recall.

Posted: February 23, 2009, 6 p.m. EST

American Health Kennels Inc., a manufacturer of dog treats based in Pompano Beach, Fla., issued a voluntary recall of its baked dog treats as a result of the expanded recall by the Peanut Corporation of America's (PCA) Blakely, Ga., plant.

The manufacturer said no reports of illness have been received. "We are effecting this recall in the interest of public safety even though we know our product is safe," American Health Kennels said in a statement.

PCA's Blakely facility is the subject of an ongoing U.S. Food and Drug Administration probe into potential Salmonella contamination of peanut paste and other peanut products.

Pets with Salmonella may be lethargic and experience diarrhea or bloody diarrhea, fever, and vomiting, according to the FDA. Some pets may show milder symptoms such as decreased appetite, fever, and abdominal pain, while other pets may display no symptoms. Pet owners are urged to contact their veterinarian if a pet has ingested the recalled product and shows these symptoms.
