

The DogChannel Newswire (02-23-09)

Rookie drug-sniffing dog finds big stash; man guilty of killing neighbor's dog; and other news.

Posted: February 23, 2009, 5 a.m. EST

Missouri Man Lets Pet Huskies Pull Him Through Streets of Town

Ron Walker makes no bones about being "a lazy man" when it comes to taking his five Siberian Huskies for a walk, the Detroit Free Press reports.

Read now >>

Marina, Calif., Dog Center Eyes Smaller Project

A group sniffing at city-owned Fort Ord property in Marina, Calif., for a center for canine studies says it doesn't need as big a bite of land as it first proposed, the Monterey County Herald reports.

Read now >>

Dallas Police Officer Won't Face Charges in Fatal Shooting of Pit Bull

McKinney police won't pursue criminal charges against an off-duty Dallas police officer who shot and killed a pit bull that he said menaced his wife, the Dallas Morning News reports.

Read now >>

Rookie Drug-Sniffing Dog Helps Find Big Pot Stash

Not bad for a rookie. The U.S. Customs and Border Protection agency says a drug-sniffing patrol dog on its first night on duty Tuesday helped its handler find a 477-pound load of marijuana, The Associated Press reports.

Read now >>

Man in Colorado Guilty of Killing Neighbor's Dog

A Jefferson County jury quickly convicted a Lakewood man Thursday for shooting and killing a neighbor's dog, the Denver Post reports.

Read now >>