

The DogChannel Newswire (02-26-09)

Creature comforts at the office; dog yoga thrives as shelters overflow; and other news.

Posted: February 26, 2009, 5 a.m. EST

Doggie Yoga, Massages Thrive in Los Angeles as Shelters Overflow

The recession is little deterrent for Los Angeles residents who insist on body wraps, massages, and aromatherapy – for their dogs and cats, Bloomberg.com reports.

Read now >>

Dogs Allowed: Creature Comforts at the Workplace

Dog-friendly policies that allow employees to bring well-behaved pets to work are popping up in many offices and, by all accounts, the downsides are minimal, USA Today reports.

Read now >>

Pet's Death More Painful Than Losing Home, Blast Survivor Says

Duane Cole lost his home in a massive explosion on Feb. 11, but the bigger heartbreak, Cole told reporters, is losing his dog, Jingles, MSNBC.com reports.

Read now >>

Man Hit While Trying to Retrieve Dog After Crash Dies From Injuries

A 43-year-old motorist who was hit by another car while trying to save his dog has died from his injuries, the Glens Falls Post-Star (N.Y.) reports.

Read now >>

Bill Would Let Owner Provide Trust for Pet

Marylanders would be able to provide for their household pets in the event that the human owner dies before Buddy under a bill given preliminary approval in the House of Delegates, the Baltimore Sun reports.

Read now >>