

The DogChannel Newswire (03-03-09)

New Yorker launches barking mad lawsuit; three dogs join pet hall of fame; and other news.

Posted: March 3, 2009, 5 a.m. EST

New Yorker Launches Barking Mad Lawsuit

A Manhattan lawyer is suing for half a million dollars because she can't stand the constant yapping of two Chihuahuas from a nearby apartment, press reports said Friday, Agence France-Presse reports.

Read now >>

Dogs Have Their Day: Three Join Pet Hall of Fame

Three dogs were named to the Wisconsin Pet Hall of Fame for heroic deeds or service to their owners, the Green Bay Press-Gazette reports.

Read now >>

Proposed Pit Bull Restrictions to Be Discussed

The debate over whether to place more restrictions on pit bulls in Wichita, Kan., went before four district advisory boards Monday, the Wichita Eagle reports.

Read now >>

Controversy Swirls Over Crufts Dog Show

With the BBC boycotting – and animal groups the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (RSPCA) and veterinary charity PDSA steering clear – this year's Crufts Dog Show promises to be an unusual one, the Los Angeles Times reports.

Read now >>

Exhibition With Disturbing Videos of Animals Leads to Protests in Italy

The artist Adel Abdessemed's subjects range from spiders to lions and dogs, The New York Times reports.

Read now >>