

Dogs Compete to Be 'Leader of the Pack'

New TV show features eight dogs competing to win a family's heart.

Posted: April 4, 2009, 5 a.m. EDT

The debut of "Leader of the Pack" follows the Reckseit family as they search for their perfect match. Choosing a dog to fit your family can be exciting and challenging, especially when the competition is fierce.

On HGTV's new reality show "Leader of the Pack," eight dogs are let loose in one family's home, competing to earn a permanent place in the home.

With a variety of breeds and plenty of personalities – both canine and human – there will plenty of excitement to watch. Dogs like Buster the energetic Beagle, Louie the lackadaisical Bichon Frise mix, and Ginger the overbearing hound mix, turn the quiet home into quite a doghouse.

Throughout the show, the eight dogs and family meet with trainers, behavioral specialists, and humane society consultants, and compete in challenges to determine who is top dog. Each week, one dog is eliminated. No tears, though – each dog is found a loving home.

Root for your own underdog when "Leader of The Pack" debuts Sunday, April 26, at 8 p.m. ET on HGTV.