"Twilight" has minted its share of new stars, from Robert Pattinson to Kristin Stewart. Ashley Greene, who plays vampire Alice, says even her dog is famous.

"It's crazy, right?" she says in the December issue of Maxim. "I think my dog is more famous than a lot of stars out there. I bet some people in Hollywood are like, 'I can't get my picture in a mag, but Ashley's pooch [Marlo] does?' It's mind-boggling."

And with "Twilight" sequel "New Moon" opening soon, Greene and Marlo have adjusted to all the attention – with pleasure.

"Oh, my God, I wanted this part so badly! I worked my butt off for it because I absolutely love Alice, my character," Greene says. "She's sweet, sexy and a killer! So when they told me I got it, I tried to play it all cool, you know, for about a minute."

But that attitude didn't last long. "Suddenly the 'Twilight' blogs started picking it up, and then fans were there taking photos, and I'm on the news, and I was like, 'What?' And then I got really nervous."

What's next? "I want to hit up James Bond," she says. "That would be awesome."
