

Bruce Jenner to Host Cynosport World Games

Dog-loving athletes and celebrities will compete in support of positive human-animal bond.

Posted: September 14, 2007, 5 a.m. EST

Bruce Jenner, a world and Olympic champion has signed on to host the 2007 Cynosport World Games in Scottsdale, Ariz., which be held October 31 through November 4.

Jenner will be joined by other dog-loving athletes and celebrities to promote positive interaction with animals and support The Humane Society of the United States. The HSUS will set up a booth at the event where celebrities and athletes can speak out against animal cruelty and encourage people to participate in positive pet activities such as dog agility.

Local qualifiers will compete in regional championships where they can advance to semi-finals and then to finals. Former Olympic diving champion Greg Louganis, a regular competitor of the event is among the athletes that have already advanced to the finals of this year's competition.

For more information about the event, visit www.cynosport.com.