

Cesar Millan Seeks Dogs for TV

The Dog Whisperer, Cesar Millan, is recruiting dog for the new season of his TV show.

Posted: April 7, 2007, 5 a.m. EST

If you live in Miami, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, San Francisco, Seattle, New York, or Washington, D.C., Cesar Millan, aka the Dog Whisperer, wants to hear from you.

Millan is accepting applications from dog owners in these cities for upcoming appearances on his National Geographic Channel TV show. Millan is especially interested in hearing from owners of dogs with thunderstorm phobias, leash walking problems, aggression, as well as mobile pet groomers and veterinarians with difficult canine clients, according to a statement released by Millan's company, Cesar Millan Inc.

Dog owners are asked to send a five- to seven-minute video introducing you and your dog. On the video, state your name, age, and occupation, and your dog's name, age, and breed. Describe the problems you're having with your dog and how they're affecting your life. The video should also show at least three instances of your dog exhibiting the undesirable behavior, and also include a description of what you love about your dog.

All video formats are permitted, except files from digital still cameras and cell phones. For more information on submitting your video, visit <http://www.dogpsychologycenter.com/dogwhisperer/submissions.php>.