

Cornell Launches Dog Health Website

The Partners in Animal Health website offers free videos and information on treatment options for common cat and dog illnesses.

Posted: March 28, 2008, 5 a.m. EST

Although the Internet offers a wealth of information about human diseases and their treatments, dog and cat owners are often at a loss. If your dog or cat was recently diagnosed with an illness, or you're seeking information about common illnesses that affect pets, try the new website, Partners in Animal Health.

Launched by Cornell University's College of Veterinary Medicine, this resource offers free, easy-to-understand online videos. These videos provide information about modern treatments available for common medical problems such as cancer and diabetes. Cornell aims to empower pet owners to make informed decisions about their dog or cat's medical care and take a more preventative approach in maintaining pet health.

Selected topics include:

Pet Owners' Guide to Cancer

This video is designed to give dog and cat owners a complete overview of cancer, including how a pet gets cancer, strategies for early detection, diagnosis, and treatment. The video also shows behind-the-scenes footage of pets who undergo radiation and chemotherapy.

Caring for Your Diabetic Cat

This video features narrated step-by-step instructions on how to care for your diabetic cat. Topics include getting the diagnoses, treatment, administering insulin, nutritional therapy, and so on.

Home Care for Cats

This narrated step-by-step video shows you how to give your cat a pill or capsules, give your cat liquid medications, trim your cat's claws, brush his teeth, and so on.

To view free videos or purchase DVDs, go to www.partnersah.vet.cornell.edu/pet.