Jessica Remo, a writer for Philadelphia Magazine, recounts a funny encounter with actress Demi Moore, who stopped to admire the writer’s three-month-old Miniature Pincher, Ollie, and got more than she bargained for.

Remo says she was walking in Philadelphia one evening last week when a woman stopped and asked about the puppy tucked in her jacket. “A woman from behind me asked if I had ‘a little Chihuahua in there,’” Remo writes on PhillyMag.com. “I turned to tell her ‘No, he’s a Miniature Pinscher,’ and as she walked over to pet him I realized she was Demi.”

Remo says Ollie, being “no dummy,” saw his opportunity and went for it. “She graciously let my little pooch lick her whole face, lips included. I was mortified.”

Moore and Remo chatted for a few minutes. “We made small talk about her newly adopted Chihuahua, and finally — needing confirmation — I said, ‘Aren’t you guys filming around here?’ She said yes, then wished me luck with him, and I wished her the same with the movie.”

Remo says the incident proves Ollie is the ultimate chick magnet. “Now I’m thinking of renting Ollie out to single dudes; if he can pick up Demi, he’s gotta be good.”
