When Kate Walsh married boyfriend Alex Young over the weekend in Ojai, Calif., she did it with tears in her eyes.

The former "Grey's Anatomy" actress reportedly erupted into tears at the wedding when she discovered a note from Young in her bouquet written in the voice of her dog Lucy, "Entertainment Tonight" reports.

Though Walsh wouldn't disclose the contents of the note, she did share a "Bridezilla" moment that happened a few days prior to the wedding.

"I had a fitting and who knew someone could get that hysterical about a bra!" said Walsh, who will star in a new "Grey's Anatomy" spin-off called "Private Practice."

"I said, 'It's not the right bra, it's not the right bra.' The sad part was there was a mirror there, so I had to see my face turn to stone, snakes coming out of my hair. It was bad. I can't believe I had a meltdown over a bra!"

Walsh became engaged to studio executive Alex Young in May. "I'm living a very good dream," she said.

"Private Practice," which also stars Taye Diggs and Tim Daly, premieres Sept. 26, 2007.
