

PetEdge Issues Dog Toothpaste Recall

The recalled pet toothpaste may be contaminated with a chemical normally found in antifreeze.

Posted: November 15, 2007, 12 p.m. EST

Due to possible diethylene glycol contamination, PetEdge has issued a voluntary recall of one of its toothpaste products for pets.

Diethylene glycol is a chemical found in antifreeze and other solvents. If ingested, it can cause headaches, renal failure, or death. PetEdge officials state they have received no reports of any illness associated with the toothpaste and are issuing the recall as a cautionary measure.

The affected product is the 1.4-oz. Top Performance ProDental Toothpaste with Toothbrush kit in both beef and mint flavors. The products' details are:

Item number: TP128

Beef Flavor UPC Code: 721343128151

Mint Flavor UPC Code: 721343128564

Consumers are urged to discard the product immediately. To receive a credit, customers will have to complete and return a PetEdge Product Destruction Log. For details, call PetEdge at (888) 211-8706.
