Best in Show

Canadian all-breed judge James Reynolds had the honor of selecting Best in Show. The four group winners from the previous night the Rottweiler, Colored Bull Terrier, Pug, and Dalmatian — joined the second night's trio of first place winners, each entering the ring under a spotlight. Reynolds carefully examined the seven worthy champions as the audience cheered on its favorites.

After one last look at each dog, Reynolds returned to the judges' table and recorded his selection.

Flanked by the Westminster president and its show chairman, Reynolds presented the traditional rosette and silver bowl to the Colored Bull Terrier Rufus, a classic example of his breed.
